Pilot Prays As Plane Fails

HAVERHILL, Mass. UPI -In the postmidnight darkness, falling free at 2,500 feet before his parachute opened, the jet fighter pilot prayed.

"I prayed that my five children would get a good father. I prayed the area was uninhabited."

Capt. Dalbert F. Sullivan of the Massachusetts Air National Guard seemed stunned as he told of ejecting himself from his chippled and powerless F86 after heading it toward a black area below.

But after he left the plane, it began turning, dropping silently, heading for a new housing development on the outskirts of this industrial city. From his tree perch, Sullivan saw a ball of flame erupt.

One resident heard "only the rush of wind" before the pilotless, single-seat plane hit. It was shortly after midnight. There was the roar, the billowing flames as the jet fuel exploded. The plane bounced off a house and skittered down a street. It bounced off a dozen parked cars. It hit another house at 19 Lackney St. It plunged nose-first into a bedroom, and flames enveloped the house. In the bedroom asleep were Pamela Gifford, 11, her brother Todd, 8, and their wirehaired fox terrier.

Sun And Shade Patio

Here's a narrow side yard put to good use with a sun-and-shade patio. Tall fence of weathered western red cedar encloses patio privately and emphasizes a planting bed outlined by a simple garden beach. Patterns of sun and shadow make this a delightful place to look at and relax in.

HAS ANYONE SEEN TOM SAWYER?

These five teenagers are doing a job that would seem endless to most people. They are painting the curbs and the white parking lines that have faded almost from sight during the past year. The question in the minds of most people who have seen these boys working is: "Are they painting the streets or themselves?" Photo by John Adams

Extra Appealing

Use Attractive Accessories To Promote Talk About Your Table

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

Never underestimate the power table accessories have to make food appear more appetizing. Serve a plain dish prettily and you add to its appeal. Needn't Buy New

This doesn't mean you have to invest in a whole new set of china or flatware to come up with an attractive summer table. Not at all!

Sometimes a small purchase with a novelty appeal can make your table worth talking about. A new plastic beverage server set, for example, that comes with matching tumblers is as pretty as it is practical. The server can be used as a refrigerator bottle so that iced coffee or lemondade can come to the table icy cool. Other Pretties

Other attractive summer accessories include paper plates, available in striking patterns and lovely colors.

They add bright appeal to a setting and the summer hostess will relish the thought that there's no dishwashing. Make your table attractive and serve something that really looks good enough to eat.

Both of today's recipes qualify on this count. Light And Lovely
